Washburn & Doughty has been designing and building fishing boats, barges, ferries, commercial passenger vessels and custom tugs since 1977.

While working with Sheridan Construction to build a new addition, a fire erupted during the production of two tugboats. Following this tragic fire, Sheridan worked quickly to create new plans which would allow Washburn & Doughty to continue their tugboat production, while the construction of their new, more efficient building took place, around the boat building process.

This new facility features two large construction bays, each with a 20-ton bridge crane, and three stories of fabrication support mezzanines running along the center of the building.

Building on our promise.
